

Atlantis Albariño, 2017

Rias Baixas, Spain

The Atlantic Ocean has always been a source of inspiration for stories, myths and legends. This magic also influences the land behind the sea. The moods of the Atlantic in this most North-Western part of Spain significantly influence the fruit grown in its vineyards. Atlantis is a project by Raul Acha, exploring small, single farm –sourced varieties.

Varietals

100% Albariño

Vineyards located in Condado de Tea, on the right bank of River Miño.

Vinification

Stainless-steel vats at a temperature of 18°C. Racking to separate the lees; it subsequently undergoes a cold stabilization, it is filtered and then finally bottled.

Tasting Notes

“Elegant lemon-yellow color, clean and glossy. It is a very intense wine on the nose with persistent quality aromas, recalling green apple and tropical fruit, such as pineapple. On the palate, it is long and persistent with a perfect acidity that matches its body, making it a very pleasant wine full of sensations.”
